

Subsets of WHY

Most never leave a subset to ask why elsewhere, why? As to the current financial fiasco it for some is hard to see beyond the subset they live in or have been trained. Monkey see, monkey do. Just envision the Keystone Cops chasing a crook in modern times. It would be humorous if the Department of Justice and other law enforcement acted like the Keystone Cops in pursuit of the financial crooks (wannabe's), but the days of fun in the sun have passed. Actually no action is more condemning than acting like fools.

Why could be seen as in two parts containing many subsets, real or imaginary, real or wannabe's could be considered a top tier subset. By design of the wannabe's you are not to understand the subsets. Why has to be of interest as to why do the elite do what they do. Is it the elite are doing nothing but weathering the storm or are the elite directing the wannabe's? This writer sees it not being the latter.

In noticing mainstream media comments it becomes a clear as a babies butt, that higher up law enforcement (subset) is directed to disregard prosecution criminal for violating statutes in order to save the intangible dollar (subset).

Think of it as a bathtub where the drain leaks, the water to makeup for the loss has to come from usually a public water source. Same principle applies to the $600+ Trillion intangible market (subset). For government leaders (subset) are in a mindset to save the intangible dollar of the too big to fail wannabe's as there is no opposition to the Federal Reserve to pump future tangible value into the intangible subset. This pump and dump of future tangible money is going to be taken from our baby's backsides for all generations to come.

Once one gets passed the confusion and cover-ups, it is hard not to see that the wannabe's have planned and executed actions in an attempt to raise their status closer to that of the elite. One main problem with this subset thinking is sustainability over the long term. Where the elite have perfected a method of sustainability over the millennia's the wannabe's quest for power is unsustainable and failure is just a matter of time (subset).

How many wannabe's subsets are there, bankers, hedge fund managers, just to name a couple of the subsets? This wannabe subset differs not much from government's or central bank's subset of kicking the can(s) down the rode. It is not that a solution has been found for perpetual motion but to avoid have to admit having one's arse kicked.

"No Comment", one of my favorite subsets. For when one is asked a question, the answer "No Comment" works well for media and in a court of law, but by the time such "No Comment" is made, many of the people have already determined guilt.

We the people in the United States know the elected choices are staged except for those the two parties call rogue's, but maybe it is time for all the people to support the election of the rogue. Very clear to see that when junior lawmakers fall to the whim of one senior member there is an injustice in lawmaking, time to shut the revolving door and throw the dirty bathwater out the revolving door.